One of the most cherished venison dishes from Bârlogul Ursului in Maramureș!

Bear steak is the ultimate delicacy among venison dishes, and we delight in satisfying our customers' desires.

High-quality bear meat contains a wealth of valuable substances, including B vitamins (B1, B2, B6, and B12), selenium, phosphorus, copper, calcium, manganese, iron, sodium, and potassium.

Beyond its evident health benefits and unique taste – an experience worth trying at least once in a lifetime – consuming properly cooked bear meat offers other advantages:

- It improves blood composition and increases hemoglobin levels;
- It can alleviate issues with the muscular system, thanks to its high B vitamin content;
- It boosts immunity and replenishes vitamin and mineral deficiencies in the body;
- It strengthens the cardiovascular system and helps prevent heart attacks and strokes.

You can pair it with an exquisite red wine, specially selected for our dishes.

Game meat is a delicacy that is quite difficult to source and is prepared based on availability. Therefore, we recommend asking your waiter about it in advance.

Thank you for your understanding!

Did you know that all game meat contains more phosphorus than fish and more iron than spinach?!

LOW FAT CONTENT, HIGH PROTEIN INTAKE

Some of the main benefits of venison (deer meat) are its extremely low fat content and high protein intake. Animals living freely are subject to the cycles of nature, eat and drink only from natural sources, and have complete freedom of movement. All these reasons considerably reduce the fat coefficient of the meat. Venison, for example, is approximately 25 times leaner than beef.

WILD TASTE AND INTENSE AROMAS

Venison is known for its distinct taste and intense aromas. Because game animals grow in the wild and feed naturally, their meat acquires an authentic, deep, and varied taste. These rich aromas are often described as being more complex and less uniform than those of meat from farm-raised animals.

WILD BOAR STEW WITH POLENTA

Wild boar meat 200g*, bell peppers 30g, onion 30g, carrots 30g, polenta 200g, red wine 100ml

500 grams | 105 LEI

Living in its natural habitat, the wild boar feeds only on grass and natural fodder. Therefore, the meat obtained from this animal does not contain hormones, steroids, colorants, antibiotics, preservatives, or other substances present in many commercial pork products.

Wild boar meat has a high protein content, specifically 74%, making it an excellent food for those who opt for a protein-rich diet. This food, highly valued in our cuisine, is also an important source of vitamins, minerals, iron, and zinc.

Among the vitamins found in wild boar meat, we can list the B-vitamin complex (B1, B2, B6, and B12) – which plays an essential role in the health of the nervous and muscular systems – vitamin D, and vitamin E.

This meat also contains selenium, an important element for the proper functioning of the thyroid gland, as well as phosphorus, which supports the proper functioning of the heart and kidneys, and the formation of lecithin. Compared to fish or spinach, wild boar meat offers a significant nutritional advantage, having a higher intake of iron and phosphorus.

In many cultures, the consumption of game meat is associated with ancient traditions and rituals, linked to hunting and humanity's connection with nature. Eating this meat can serve as a way to celebrate and preserve the traditions and culture of hunting.

Venison represents not only a healthy and tasty food option but also an authentic culinary experience connected to nature. Its wild taste, intense aromas, and nutritional value are just a few reasons why including this meat in our diet can bring significant benefits to our health and for diversifying the culinary experience.

Zero antibiotics, hormones, and enhancers

Another major advantage of quality game meat is the complete absence of flavor enhancers, antibiotics, growth hormones, colorants, and preservatives.

A noble ingredient deserves a fitting recipe; however, much of the game's taste, texture, and finesse is due to the meat itself, being the result of nature allowed to run its course.

CHAMPAGNE MOËT & CHANDON – IMPÉRIAL

750 ml | 495 LEI

The name Moët & Chandon has become almost synonymous with the word “champagne”. Characterized by originality and innovation, the House of Moët & Chandon is known today worldwide for the exceptional quality and unparalleled personality of the champagne it produces. Since its founding in 1743 to the present day, Moët & Chandon has passed down from generation to generation that “savoir-faire” which distinguishes its products from other varieties on the market.

Founder Claude Moët was the first person to implement these values when he transformed the champagne he created into the most sought-after variety in Europe. However, the popularity of this champagne reached peak levels under the leadership of his grandson, Jean Remy Moët, becoming one of the most important champagne brands in the world and also an international symbol of success.
